The Wild Animal Olympics

At the National Safari Park, animals participate in an extraordinary athletic tournament every year. Scientists observe their amazing physical abilities to study wildlife. In this year's tournament, cheetahs are the fastest land runners, reaching speeds up to 100 km/h! However, African elephants are much stronger than cheetahs. Elephants can carry huge tree trunks effortlessly, but they can't run fast or jump high.

Monkeys and chimpanzees are recognized as the most agile climbers in the forest. They can climb tall oak trees easily and perform impressive gymnastics in the air. The park nutritionists organize their daily diet strictly: 'How much water does an elephant drink per day?' or 'How many bananas does a chimpanzee consume for breakfast?'

A adult chimpanzee eats about six sweet bananas every morning and drinks plenty of fresh water. These animals train every day because they want to win the forest trophy next month.
