Lucas used to live in a small coastal city, so high mountains were completely new to him. When they arrived at the airport in Cusco, the weather was very cold and foggy.

On their second day, while they were walking around the historic centre of the city, they met an old friend from university. His name was Marco. Marco was working as a local tourist guide in Cusco. He invited them to eat a traditional meal at a quiet local restaurant. The food was so delicious that Lucas ate two large plates. They talked about their past school memories for hours and laughed a lot.

The next morning, they took an early train to Aguas Calientes. While the train was moving along the valley, Lucas was taking photos of the spectacular green river and mountains. However, Elena was feeling unwell because the train journey was too long and bumpy for her. She did not have enough energy to walk fast when they arrived.
