Celebrating Independence Day at School

Last week, my school celebrated Indonesia's Independence Day on August 17th. Everyone was excited because we had been preparing for the special event for days.

The day started with a flag-raising ceremony in the school yard at 7:00 AM. All students and teachers wore neat uniforms. The flag hoist team did an impressive job raising the "Sang Saka Merah Putih" while we sang the national anthem, "Indonesia Raya". The atmosphere was solemn and full of pride.

After the ceremony, the fun part began. The student council organized several classic traditional games. I decided to join the sack race, while my best friend registered for the marble-in-spoon race. During the sack race, I lost my balance and fell near the finish line, which made the audience laugh. Even though I didn't win, it was hilarious and enjoyable. The most exciting event was the tug-of-war competition. My class team made it to the final round and won first place through great teamwork and effort.

Before going home, the principal announced the winners and handed out prizes. My class went home with a huge trophy for winning the tug-of-war.

I was exhausted by the end of the day, but I felt very happy. Celebrating Independence Day with my classmates reminded me of the importance of unity, togetherness, and keeping our spirit high.
