This year, James has a new P.E. teacher at school called Mr Street. James thinks his classes are really fun and the children always do fun activities. At the moment, the class are studying maps and directions in P.E. class, and what they need to do if they get lost.

So, Mr Street took James and his classmates to a mountain that was close to their school. They woke up early on a Saturday morning and prepared their rucksacks - everyone took a compass, a torch, suncream, some sandwiches, a piece of fruit and a bottle of water in case they got hungry or thirsty when they were in the mountains.

It was a hot day, but the sun was hiding behind the clouds so James didn't put any sun cream on his face because he didn't think he would get sunburn. The mountain was tall so it was difficult to climb, but the children loved using their maps to guide them and in the end, they all ran down to the bottom.

At the end of the trip, Mr Street looked at James and said, "Oh, James! You must wear sun cream next time, even if it isn't sunny!" James had burnt his face and he was very red.

"Sorry, Mr. Street," said James, "Next time I'll put sun cream on to protect my face from the sun."
