Which type of feedback can you identify in Petru and Vlad's (full) conversation?

Look at the five highlights in the transcript and identify what feedback strategies they are. Put the number (1-5) in the corresponding box.

V: About long bike rides. I think the advantages are that the children doesn't get bored and is a fun activity for both children and the family. But I think maybe if it's a long bike ride, I think maybe the parents don't have that 1. much time to...
P: Time 2. and you can get exhausted.
V:Yeah.
P:About going to a concert, I don't know much from my experience. I didn't go to a concert with my family. But I think it's a great activity. And some advantages are certain in the bond between families. And some disadvantages are when choosing the concert. Maybe the children. The children don't like 3.the type of concert their parents picked.
V:They prefer different style of music...
P: Yeah, different styles. How do you think about visiting historical sites?
I think this could be interesting, maybe, but more for the parents than the children. But if the children like the history, it's okay for both of them.
V: 4. I agree, but what kind of historical sites could be interesting enough for teenagers, too?
P: Mm, maybe castles, because they're generally awesome and who wouldn't like imagining themselves as the king or queen of the castle?
V: That's right! Let's move on to playing video games together...I'd say it can be good for bonding, but only from time to time.
P: 5.What do mean by that, how often are you thinking?
V: Not more than once a month, I personally like to play alone and usually end up fighting with my siblings if we play for too long.
P: I see.

- Reformulating
- Asking for clarifications
- Asking for further details
- Extending
- Echoing

LIVEWORKSHEETS