A Delicious Journey

My name is Noy, and I am a preservice teacher from Laos. I love food because it tells us a lot about different cultures. I have tried many delicious dishes, but I still want to discover more tastes around the world.

Last year, I visited Thailand with my friends. We ate tom yum kung, a spicy and sour soup with shrimp. I enjoyed it very much because I love spicy food. I have eaten Thai food several times since that trip, but the first bowl of tom yum kung was unforgettable.

My next adventure was in Italy. During my visit to Rome, I tried pizza for the first time. The pizza had cheese, tomatoes, and fresh basil. It was delicious! Since then, I have learned how to make a simple pizza at home. My family enjoyed it when I cooked it for them last month.

One day, I hope to visit Japan. I have never tried authentic Japanese sushi, but I have watched many cooking videos about it. My friend visited Japan last year and told me that sushi was fresh and delicious. She also bought me a pair of chopsticks as a souvenir.

I have also learned about Indian and Mexican food. Indian curry often uses different spices, while Mexican tacos can contain meat, vegetables, and salsa. I have not tasted these dishes yet, but I would love to try them in the future.

As a future teacher, I believe food is a wonderful way to learn about the world. We can learn new words, explore different cultures, and share our experiences through food. I have discovered that trying new dishes can help us become more open-minded and curious.
