

For most of us, our parents are our first role models	From when we are young children, they help us learn how to interact with other people	how to share
how to ask for what we need	and how to disagree without hurting someone	They are inherently interested in us and want us to do well
Furthermore, our parents teach us how to be adults in our society	A mother demonstrates to her daughters how to be a daughter, a woman, a wife, and a mother.	Lessons learned from our parents will stay with us throughout our lives.