

The four sisters, Las Mariposas, form a close friendship and learn about their rights.

The sisters learn about the need to fight for their rights and get involved in the movement.

The sisters share their dreams and hope for a better future for themselves and their families.

The sisters take part in a protest and speak out for justice and change.

The sisters face danger and fear because of their activism.

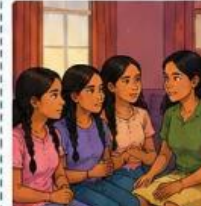

One sister, Minerva, keeps a journal and writes about what is happening.

The sisters are forced to leave their home and go into hiding to stay safe.

Soldiers arrive in their town, and the sisters realize they must escape.

The sisters find a new place to live and meet other people who help them.

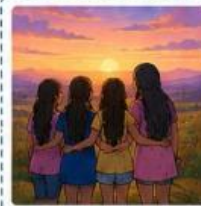

The sisters remember their grandmother's words and see the mariposas as a symbol of hope, strength, and their journey.

The sisters make the difficult decision to leave their country and try to reach the United States.

The sisters begin school in a new country and work hard to learn and build their future.

Even though they have faced many challenges, the sisters stay united and continue to hope for a better tomorrow.

The mariposas represent the sisters' strength, courage, and the spirit of never giving up.

The sisters hide in a safe place, waiting for the danger to pass.

Write the numbers 1-15 in the correct order. LIVEWORKSHEETS