READING

1 Read the article quickly. Put the events in the order they happened.

A young hero!

Emma, a three-year-old girl, has made the news after saving the life of her mother, by calling 999 and asking for an ambulance.

It was just a normal day at home for Catherine, and her three-year-old daughter. They were the only two people at their home in Somerset, England. Catherine was heavily pregnant at the time, looking forward to giving birth to Emma's new baby brother in just a few months' time.

Unfortunately, something bad happened. Catherine fell down some stairs, and hit her head badly. She couldn't recover from her fall or get up again. Catherine couldn't open her eyes, or talk. It was an impossible situation. If no-one did anything, Catherine's and her baby's lives would be in danger.

A short time later, Sarah Morris, who was working at the South Western Ambulance Service received a phone call. At the other end of the phone was one of the youngest callers she had ever had. It was three-year-old Emma. Surprisingly, Emma was very calm and answered all of Sarah's questions. She didn't seem to be terrified, as you would expect many children or even adults to be in a similar situation. Emma explained that her mummy kept going to sleep, and that there was a baby in her tummy.

In order to help, Sarah Morris wanted to know the name and address of the person who had been injured. Emma was able to provide all the information that was needed. Soon, an ambulance was on its way. Emma even managed to unlock the door by the time the ambulance arrived. Emma and her mother were then taken to hospital, and were looked after by doctors. Now, both Catherine and her new baby are fine.

Catherine remembers very little about what happened that day, but she is very proud of her daughter. No-one had taught Emma how to dial 999 and ask for an ambulance. However, it seems that Emma had remembered her other brother, aged five years old, talking about how to call for ambulances and the fire department after learning about it at school.

One moral to take away from this story is that it is never too early to teach your children what to do in an emergency, or how they can ask others for help.
