Rose: Hi, Jack! Are you ready for our school trip to London next week?

Jack: Almost! Our teacher has confirmed that every student is required by school rules to bring a valid passport. We (1) _____ bring ours, or we won't be allowed to travel.

Rose: Absolutely. The school has also made one rule very clear: students are prohibited from leaving the group without permission. We (2) _____ leave the group on our own.

Jack: Right! And the teacher gave us some advice about the long flight. She said we (3) _____ drink plenty of water to avoid getting dehydrated.

Rose: That's good advice. You (4) _____ stay up late the night before the flight, either. You'll be exhausted the next day!

Jack: You're right. By the way, do we need to buy our own tickets for the museums?

Rose: No. The school has already paid for all the museum tickets, so we (5) _____ pay for them ourselves.

Jack: Great! What about Oliver? His parents are taking him directly to the airport because he lives far from school.

Rose: He (6) _____ meet us at school at 5 a.m. He can meet the group at the airport instead.

Jack: I remember our trip to Cusco last year. We (7) _____ get up at 4 a.m. because our bus left very early.

Rose: I remember! And next year, if we go on the exchange program, we (8) _____ apply for our visas several months in advance because the application process takes time.

Jack: True. Our English teacher also gave us some advice about communicating with local people. She said we (9) ought to learn a few basic expressions in English before travelling.

Rose: I agree. And the school handbook says that all students are required to wear their school identification badges during organized activities. We (10) _____ wear them whenever we're with our group.
