Du Re Mi by A Ramli
A Film Review

You will be laughing from start to finish. I rarely enjoyed Ramli's films before as I was confused by the complex storylines. But this movie has everything I wanted from a comedy but also not what I had expected at the same time. This is definitely worth seeing in a cinema.

7. From the review of Du Re Mi, Mariam
- A finds Ramli's movies not to her liking.
 - B thinks the plot is difficult to understand.
 - C feels this comedy offers something different.

TERHADPart 3

Read the text below and answer questions 17 to 24.

Cendol

My favourite Malaysian dessert has always been a bowl of creamy cendol. It is a cold and sweet treat that keeps me coming back for more. Shaved ice is first piled into a bowl. It is then topped with green jelly noodles and mixed with red beans and coconut milk. A cendol will not be complete without few spoonful of the tasty palm syrup. Nowadays you can even find new combinations being added to the traditional cendol recipe. Local delicacies like durians and scoops of different flavours of ice-cream have been added to this humble dessert. It is simply delicious and extremely refreshing, especially when the weather is hot.

My go-to cendol stall is the one opposite Hong Leong Bank on Gurney Road. Even before the stall opens for business at 11 a.m. daily, impatient customers start queuing up for a bowl of cendol which costs RM 3. When the stall is about to close at 4 p.m. and the cendol has sold out, customers will still stop by the stall to buy fresh coconut water and coconut jelly.

The stall owner, whose father founded the business, started selling cendol at this spot since 2002. Today, he runs the business with the help of two workers. Before this, the owner worked as an office boy. Unfortunately, he lost his job in 2005, so he decided to join his father's business. It is one of the best cendol stalls in Penang. 'Once you have tried my cendol, you will come back here for more,' he claims proudly.

Read the text and answer questions 25 to 34

ALL ABOUT WHALES

Whales live in the water and have a fish-shaped body but they are not considered as a fish. The reason may lie in the fact that their ancestors used to live on land. During the thousands and thousands of years they have been living in the water, whales have grown to look like fish in their shape and other outside features, but they are built and they live like land animals.

A whale's flippers, for instance, have bones of a five-fingered hand. The most apparent difference between whales and fish is that baby whales feed on their mother's milk like other little mammals. They are not hatched from an egg but are born alive.

They have no fur coat to keep themselves warm in the cold water. Instead, they have blubber, a layer of fat under the skin which preserves heat and is as good as a fur coat.

Whales breathe differently from fish. Instead of gills, they have lungs and they take in air through two nostrils or 'blowholes' on top of their heads. When they go under water, these nostrils are closed so no water can get in.

At one time, whaling or hunting of whales was an important industry to produce a number of valuable products. Besides providing good meat to eat, their flesh and bones are made into fertilizer. The blubber of the whales provides excellent oil for making soap and cosmetics. Unfortunately, due to uncontrolled whaling, the population of whales has declined tremendously.

TERHADPart 5*Questions 35 - 40

You are going to read a story about a stonecutter. Choose from the sentences (A – H) to fit each gap (35 – 40). There are two extra sentences which you do not need to use.

For each question, mark the correct answer (A – H) on your answer sheet.

THE STONECUTTER WHO WAS NEVER SATISFIED

On a hot summer day in China, a stonecutter worked long and hard hammering stones under the blazing sun. 35 That day was hotter than any other days. He thought to himself the sun is the most powerful being in the world as it is very hot.

“I wish I could be the sun!” he cried. A fairy heard his wish and the sun he became. 36 It was wonderful to shine so bright! He believed he was the strongest.

Then a cloud came along and his light was blocked. How could that be? A cloud is greater than him! 37 That wish too was granted and he became a cloud, happy just to float through the blue sky. Then along came the wind. It blew him around and would not let him be in peace!

He declared, “If I can’t have my peace, then I’d rather blow free. I want to be a fierce wind!” The fairy listened and once more she offered help. Now he felt magnificent. He broke branches and chased leaves. 38 He blew as hard as he could, but the rock didn’t move.

He whispered, “If I were a rock, no one would bother me. A rock is the best thing to be!” So, the fairy turned him into a big, heavy rock. He sat very still and watched time go by. 39 They were trying to break him into pieces.

“Please, fairy!” he begged. 40 “Now I want to be nobody else but me.” One last time, the stonecutter got his wish. He picked up his hammer and went back to work under the blazing sun.
