Every autumn, students at Sunlight Secondary School take part in a meaningful project called "Warm Winter for All". The project aims to help disadvantaged children and elderly people in remote villages prepare for the cold winter. Right from September, hundreds of students collect used textbooks, comic books, warm jackets, blankets, and school things. Instead of throwing away old items, the students wash the clothes carefully and classify the books by grade.

In addition to collecting donations, the school also organizes a "Green Sunday Fair". At the fair, students sell handmade postcards, recycled paper bags, and small pots of succulents that they grow themselves. All the money raised from the fair is used to buy new woollen hats, socks, and nutritious milk for orphans. Last October, fifty student volunteers and ten teachers travelled to a mountainous commune in Yen Bai Province. They handed out gifts, cooked a warm lunch for the villagers, and taught the local children how to wash their hands properly to avoid winter illnesses. Through these practical activities, students not only support the community but also learn valuable life skills and teamwork.

23. The "Warm Winter for All" project only helps elderly people in big cities. _____

24. Students wash the old clothes carefully and sort the books before donating them. _____

25. At the "Green Sunday Fair", students sell fast food and soft drinks to raise money. _____

26. The volunteers taught local children how to wash their hands to prevent winter sicknesses. _____
