Dear ...

This is just a short note to say that I'm having a party for my 18th birthday on Saturday 4th September. I hope you can come. It's going to be a fancy dress party, so you'll have to wear something interesting! There'll be a band and we'll be able to dance all night.

I know it won't be easy for you to get here from Scotland, but I'd love to see you. You could stay with us for the weekend. Let me know if you can come.

Love,
Hannah

Hi ...

Have you made any plans for Saturday yet? If not, would you like to come over to my place in the evening? Sam will be back from New Zealand and we're inviting a few people to welcome him home. Come for dinner, at about 7.30. If the weather's nice, we'll have a barbecue outdoors.

See you on Saturday, I hope.

Eddie

* RSVP is an abbreviation of the French phrase Repondez, s'il vous plaît. It translates to 'Respond, if you please' or better still,

'Respond please.'

Hello there!

Thanks a lot for inviting me on Saturday, but I'm afraid I won't be able to come. My parents are going out and I've promised to stay at home and look after my sisters. Please say hi to Sam for me. I'll ring him at the weekend and hope to see him next week.

Adam

Dear ...

Thanks very much for your invitation. The party sounds fantastic and I'd love to come. I'm going to get a train on Saturday morning, so I'll probably arrive at about three o'clock. Thanks also for inviting me to stay at your place - great! I'm looking forward to seeing you all.

Love
Fiona

Dear ...

Thank you very much for your wedding invitation. I'd love to come. I know it will be a wonderful occasion and I'm really looking forward to it.

With best wishes
from Alice

IV. Read the texts again and answer the questions.

1. Where are Beth and Andy getting married?
2. Where will the wedding reception be?
3. What's the date of Hannah's party?
4. How old will she be?
5. What time are the guests arriving at Eddie's place?
6. Who is replying „yes“ to an invitation?
7. Who is replying „no“?
8. Which guest will wear a special costume?
9. What address will Alice use when she sends her reply?
10. Why will Adam be at home on Saturday evening?
11. How is Fiona going to travel to London?
12. Is Sam at home at the moment?

WELL DONE!
