The school is preparing a calendar of special events. The English storytelling competition will be held on the twenty-third of March. The school band will perform on the twenty-eighth of April, and the Helping Hand Project will take place on the thirty-first of May. Students must write each event on the correct date so nobody misses it. Lina's birthday is on the twenty-ninth of June, but she will celebrate it on Saturday because her birthday falls on a school day. Her classmate Ben was confused and wrote the band performance under March. Lina checked the calendar and helped him correct it. They agreed that checking dates carefully is important when planning school activities.
