Sophie was spending six weeks in New York City with her mother. They were staying in a hotel near Central Park. While her mother worked, Sophie explored the city with her babysitter, Emma.

One sunny morning, Emma had a surprise. "We're going on an adventure today!"

First, they took the subway to an art museum. Sophie loved the enormous paintings and colorful sculptures. "Look, Emma! That painting looks like my bedroom!" she laughed.

After the museum, they stopped at a little café for lunch. Sophie ordered a cheese sandwich and an enormous chocolate milkshake.

Next, they took another subway train to the zoo. Sophie watched the penguins swimming and the monkeys climbing trees. Her favorite animal was a sleepy brown bear.

"I wish I could take him home!" she said.

"Well, maybe we can find a smaller bear," Emma replied with a smile.

Their final stop was a wonderful toy store. There were hundreds of toys, but Sophie went straight to the teddy bears. She chose a soft brown bear with a blue ribbon. "I'll call him Mr. Buttons!"

By the time they got on the subway home, Sophie was very tired. She sat next to Emma, holding Mr. Buttons tightly.

As the train moved through the tunnels, her eyes slowly closed. She dreamed of colorful paintings, swimming penguins and dancing teddy bears.

"Wake up, Sophie. We're home!" Sophie smiled sleepily. What a wonderful day!
