

Relative pronouns – Charles Dickens

Complete the text about Charles Dickens using « who », « which » or « whose ». Put a (-) if who and which are not necessary.

Charles Dickens was an English writer lived from 1812 to 1870. The books he wrote have been translated into many different languages.

Dickens, family was very poor, had to start work when he was very young. In England at that time, people could not pay their debts were sent to prison. This happened to Dickens' father first name was John. So, Dickens, was only a boy, had to visit his father in prison.

Later Dickens' books were based on people he had known and places he had lived in.
For example, in 'David Copperfield' he wrote about the prison visits he paid to his father. In 'Oliver Twist' he described children were poor and he wrote about orphans - children parents had died.

Dickens, was also a good actor, often read his stories himself to audiences in England and America.

He married a woman name was Catherine and father was, in fact, Dickens' first publisher.

