The Traditional Market Near My House

> The traditional market near my house is small but very lively. It has a long tin roof, and the floor is made of gray concrete. Rows of stalls stand on both sides of a narrow path. Each stall is full of colorful vegetables, fresh fish, and piles of fruit.
> Every morning, the market is crowded with people. Sellers shout their prices loudly, and buyers bargain with smiling faces. The air smells of fried bananas and fresh herbs. My mother likes to shop here because the food is cheap and fresh.

8. Distinguish the details in the text by their type. Tell the difference between what the market looks like, what people say or do, and what it smells like. Then drag each detail into the correct box.
