At the Seaside

I love to walk beside the sea.
I love to feel the wind against my skin.
I love the smell of fish and crabs.
I love to feel the sand between my toes.
I love to taste the salt in the air.
I love to feel the sun against my face.
I love to hear the waves crashing on the beach.
I love to feel the sea against my skin when I swim.
I love to hear people splashing in the water.
I love to see people playing games on the beach.
I love to touch the sand and make castles on the beach.
I love the taste and feel of ice-cream on my tongue.
I love the sights and smells at the fairground.
I always love my holidays at the seaside.

The Monster Hunt

There was nothing to do
And it was cold and dark,
So we went to hunt for monsters,
In the trees by the park.
It was absolutely silent,
You couldn't hear a sound.
And everybody jumped
When a leaf hit the ground.
Then we heard a noise behind us,
"Look! What's that behind that tree?"
Well, if it was a monster,
We didn't wait to see.
"Did anybody see it?"
"No, I don't think so."
"Did anybody hear it?"
"I really don't know."
"I heard footsteps,"
"I heard a dog bark,"
"I heard glass break,"
But it was very dark.
So no one saw the monster
But we all heard the sound,
And we're absolutely certain
That it was around.
One boy saw a shadow
"Maybe it was a tree."
Another said,
"It felt like a monster to me."
Then everyone was quiet,
And a little boy said,
"There was a great big monster
And it touched me on the head."
And everybody laughed and laughed.
The little boy laughed too.
"But I did see a monster,
It's absolutely true."
And after that day,
Whenever it is dark,
No one ever goes
Near the trees by the park.
