Jill Berkley is an English teacher at a big secondary school in London. She lives in a small house near the school with her husband Mark and her two sons, Jack and Tom. Her husband is also a teacher, but he teaches at a different school. He is a true artist and his students love drawing and painting with him.

Jill has a very busy life. She gets up at half past six every day. She has breakfast and then she has a shower and gets dressed. The family has three pets: a dog and two cats. Before going to school, she takes the family dog for a quick walk in the park and feeds the cats. After that she wakes the children up and makes sandwiches for their lunch. At eight o'clock she goes to school and her school day begins.

She teaches four lessons a day, Monday to Thursday, and then on Friday she has five lessons. She enjoys teaching very much but she is always tired at the end of the week because her classes are very big and she works very hard.

On Saturdays Jill usually gets up late and reads the newspaper and she enjoys spending time with Mark. The boys often go out with their friends.

Sunday is a family day so they all do something together. When there is a good film on, they go to the cinema or they go to the local pizzeria for an Italian meal.

Time goes very quickly and it's Monday again!
