Cartoon by Samuel Akinfenwa Onwusa, 2015.

FACT FILE:

Samuel Akinfenwa Onwusa was born in Spain in 1987.

What gender equality means to him: « Gender equality is a very important challenge and inextricably linked to education. Regardless of gender or ethnicity, we are all human beings and therefore equal in all the most important aspects. Gender equality is a goal that has to be set in the minds of people, especially children, to thrive* peace and harmony. »

About his comic:
« My comic reflects the rejection and intolerance that is given to women in job interviews, ignoring the education or knowledge they have for the position. »

Fill in the text with the missing words to tell the story of the comic strip:

male mask	holding	he has interviewed	the same woman	to pretend
doesn't hire	hired	a job	a young woman	shaking hands
disappointed	it is unfair	is competent	she wears a graduation hat

In this comic strip, in the first two panels, I can see ..... who is applying for ..... .
She is probably qualified because ..... . However, the recruiter ..... her. She looks very ..... to be turned down.
Although she ..... , she is not chosen.
In the third panel, I can see ..... . She is ..... a ..... in front of her face ..... she is a man.
Finally her job interview seems to be successful since* they are ..... .
Nonetheless*, we understand she is ..... because the recruiter believes ..... a man!!
The message the cartoonist wants to convey in his drawing is quite clear: we are all equal, that's why ..... to hire someone based on gender alone. He strives* for gender equality.
