Travel has always been difficult on the Faroe Islands. The Faroese have worked hard to find solutions to their transport problems. Travellers have been able to drive over a _____¹ which connects two northern islands since 1973. There are also shorter tunnels connecting the northern islands. The roundabout in the new tunnel system is at the geographical _____² of the country. The lowest point in the tunnel is 187 metres below sea level. This new project is important because it will improve the country's economy. There aren't many job opportunities in small _____³ on the _____⁴, so people are moving away. Driving around the _____⁵ to the capital every day takes over an hour each way. With the new tunnel, the driving time is much quicker. It will cost around 10 euros to travel through the _____⁶, but regular users will pay less. Two more tunnels _____⁷ the capital and the south islands are planned. Attracting more tourists will also help the country's economy. The Faroes are one of the most beautiful countries in the _____⁸. You can travel to the Faroes by air or on a _____⁹ from Denmark.

Choose one of these options: a "who said it?" activity or a discussion about bridges and tunnels.

Who said each thing: a villager, a tourist, the roundabout artist or a government official?

1) I can't wait to drive through the tunnel system - I wonder if you can stop and take photos?

2) This is an expensive project, but it will really help our country.

3) This is the best of both worlds – I can stay in my home and still find a job.

4) Creating an artwork at the centre of the islands really made me think.

Think of more things these people might say and write them in the boxes.
