Knebworth House is one of the oldest stately homes in the UK. It is also one of the most popular locations for the world's film makers. Not surprisingly, the Gothic architecture of the house appealed to American film director Tim Burton, when he (A1) ... it. He (A2) ... a new version of the film Batman at the time in the UK. He thought that the facade of the building (A3) ... perfect as the exterior of Wayne Manor, the home of Batman. But the inside of Wayne Manor was actually shot at another big house in the same area — Hatfield House. The inside of Knebworth House has also been used in many films. An important scene from the 2010 Oscar-winning film The King's Speech was shot in the ballroom. It starred Colin Firth as the young King George VI of England. The ballroom was the venue for a party which (A4) ... by his older brother Edward. In a corner of the room, Edward tells George that he (A5) ... to marry a divorced American woman, Wallis Simpson, something which (A6) ... it impossible for him to be King of England. It is George who becomes King instead. And, of course, like many other historic buildings in the UK, Knebworth (A7) ... an appearance in the Harry Potter films. Knebworth House is a must for all cinema lovers visiting the UK.

For Olympic gold medallist Tom Ransley losing the Boat Race was the biggest disappointment of his life.

§ 1. The Boat Race is a unique event. It pulls on the tribal instincts of human nature and the desire for belonging. Everyone picks a side. The millions who watch worldwide on TV will cheer on either the Cambridge Light Blues or the Oxford Dark Blues.

§ 2. From an early age I shouted for the Light Blues. I could never understand why the losing crew didn't simply row faster. It all looked so terribly obvious and easy. Like a coach in the making, my ten-year-old-self would tell the slower crew: 'You're losing! Row faster.' Little did I know that a decade later I'd be racing for Cambridge, stuck in that miserable second spot.

§ 3. The hardest test I faced at Cambridge presented itself at 5.20 a.m. every day. The alarm always tested my resolution. It presented a choice between continuing my quest to win the Boat Race, or sleep. I came agonisingly close to throwing away my Boat Race dreams on quite a few occasions. Instead, I would drag my aching body out from under the covers into the morning darkness. A typical day started with an early indoor rowing session and lectures. A quick lunch preceded the afternoon work on the water and then it was back to college for tutorials.

§ 4. A Boat Race campaign means seven months of dedication. Avoiding injury, I somehow managed to secure myself a seat in the boat. Our only objective was to beat a heavily favoured Oxford crew. Two days before the race, our best rower was forced to withdraw on medical grounds. It was a brutal setback for our inexperienced crew.

§ 5. Eventually, the time had come and we stepped out into the cries of the crowd. The umpire (судья) raised his flag. Attention. Go! The boat crashed through rough tidal waves and into a cold, unrelenting headwind. The river conditions were bleak, but less bleak than those arriving in the minds of my crew. I refused to accept the inevitable, but it was clear to the millions of people watching that Cambridge had already lost the battle. Then Oxford suddenly kicked again somewhere past halfway and at that point it really was all over. My memories of the second half of the race are hazy, but I'm sure there was a definite point at which my legs failed. Despite asking for more, there was nothing left to give. The finish line brought total exhaustion.

§ 6. What appeals to me is the simple and brutal nature of the event. Head to head. Them or us. That is what drew me to the event. The athletes must commit fully in search of the win. This is why it matters. That is why the losing crew will hurt so much: there's no preparation for losing.

A37. Tom means that as a boy, he

- 1) dreamt of rowing in the race himself one day.
- 2) used to enjoy pretending to be one of the coaches.
- 3) had no concept of the huge effort the crews were putting in.

A38. In the third paragraph we learn that Tom

- 1) convinced himself to look forward to the sound of his alarm clock.
- 2) sometimes wondered whether all the pain was worth it.
- 3) thought about rowing a lot when he was studying.

A39. In the fourth paragraph, what does Tom say about the Boat Race he rowed in?

- 1) Few people gave Cambridge much chance of winning that year.
- 2) The preparation and attitude of the Cambridge crew was perfect.
- 3) Cambridge were confident they could overcome any obstacles.

A40. What does Tom find most appealing about the Boat Race?

- 1) the fame it brings for the participants
- 2) the desire not to let his teammates down

When American teenager Abby Sunderland, 16, set off alone across the ocean, she was following in the footsteps of her brother, Zac. He had previously broken the world record for the youngest person to sail round the world solo. But when Abby's yacht was hit by gigantic waves, part of it was destroyed, including her satellite communication system. But after what must have been a terrifying experience, she was eventually found and rescued.

When the news of her failed voyage broke, both Abby and her family were strongly criticised. 'Her parents can't have been thinking clearly to let her go on such a dangerous trip,' people complained. (A43) ____ But Abby's family didn't accept this at all. They insisted that Abby was a very experienced sailor. 'And anyway,' they protested, 'teenagers should be allowed to face challenges.'

(A44) ____ The list of these young sailors keeps growing. David Dicks, Jesse Martin, Jessica Watson — all of these teenagers have shared the same ambition.

The latest teenager to make a solo attempt to cross the globe was Laura Dekker, 16. Laura's parents are sailors and she was born on a boat, so sailing must be in her blood. During her journey, she had to battle fierce ocean storms, as well as facing the threat of pirates. It took her a year to complete the voyage, but she did it in the end. (A45) ____ But unlike the other teenagers, she took breaks from sailing, stopping off in exotic destinations.

Back home Laura must have hoped her triumph would be recognised. (A46) ____ They disapprove of teenagers putting themselves at such risk.

So should Laura and other teen sailors be banned from making any similar attempts in the future? That would be harsh. Most teenagers like adventure. There's a lot to be said for challenge and adventure. Going on an expedition can be a way to find out about yourself and what your limits are. But it's fun to go with others and be one of a team. You may get the chance to try your hand at adventure sports, like whitewater rafting and paragliding. Are you listening, all you thrill-seekers out there? (A47) ____ You must do or you wouldn't rush off to theme parks so often!

It's pretty clear that most teens enjoy some kind of challenge. (A48) ____ But we need to be sensible, too. If things go horribly wrong, you do need somebody on hand to help you out. That's why it's much better to go on a well-organised expedition. Teens don't want to be over-protected, but putting yourself in serious danger is a different matter.

Заполните пропуски A43—A45 одним из предложенных текстовых фрагментов (1—5). Два фрагмента являются лишними.

- 1) It must have been tough to go through all that alone!
- 2) Like Abby, the other teen sailors were willing to risk their lives.
- 3) Of course, Abby and Zac are not the only teens willing to risk their lives just to be the youngest to sail round the world alone.
- 4) They pointed out that Abby could easily have drowned and if that had happened, her parents would only have had themselves to blame.
- 5) A study from the Rhode Island Hospital concluded that sailing is more dangerous than skiing and snowboarding.

Заполните пропуски A46—A48 одним из предложенных текстовых фрагментов (1—5). Два фрагмента являются лишними.

- 1) After all, we all need to move out of our comfort zones to some extent if we're going to grow as people.
- 2) But the World Sailing Record authorities had already stopped recognising records for 'youngest' sailors.
- 3) Many of you enjoy the adrenaline rush that comes from doing something scary.
- 4) When does courage become just plain recklessness?
- 5) Sailing is often perceived as being an expensive sport, rather than a fun past time that appeals to many different types of people.
