

LISTENING

You will hear an interview with a woman called Karen Jackson who runs a holiday company for teenagers with special needs. Decide if each sentence is True (T) or False (F).

Karen got the idea for her current job when she was working as a travel agent.

Karen gives the example of people who can't see well that need help when travelling.

Karen says that on her company's holidays, people can go camping if they wish.

Karen's company hires people with particular skills to help the teenagers with special needs.

Karen admits that her holidays can be a little more expensive than some others.

Karen points out that museums are usually suitable places to take people with special needs.

Karen was pleased that they managed to get one teenager, Nina, to go swimming.

Karen was working on planes when she got the idea for her company.

Karen saw that people with special needs require help when they were travelling.

Karen says that teenagers can go skiing in the winter on her holidays.

Karen says they try to make the holidays as cheap as possible.

Karen thinks that staff in museums should do more to help visitors with special needs.

One teenager called Nina on one of Karen's holidays was blind.

A member of Nina's family went into the water with Nina.

LIVELIVEWORKSHEETS