I never knew I had a brother!

It was just an ordinary day when seventy-year-old Maisie Cooper stopped to give directions to a tourist. When the well-dressed Canadian said the name of the street Maisie offered to show him the way.

'While we were chatting, he told me his father had lived here before he emigrated to Canada. Then he mentioned his father's name, and that's when we realised!'

She grew up believing she was an only child. After her parents' separation her mother brought her up as a single parent.

She thought she would be much happier with a bigger family.

Since that meeting Maisie has enjoyed getting to know her newly discovered family.

Ronnie and Janet have extended their stay in London, and now they are planning a visit to Canada for Maisie.
