Martial arts are codified systems and traditions of combat practiced for a number of reasons such as self-defense; military and law enforcement applications; competition; physical, mental, and spiritual development; entertainment; and the preservation of a nation's intangible cultural heritage.

Although the term martial art has become associated with the fighting arts of East Asia, it originally referred to the combat systems of Europe as early as the 1550s.

There are two Techniques taught in martial arts, namely armed vs. unarmed, and within these categories armed: by type of weapon (swordsmanship, stick fighting etc.) meanwhile, the unarmed categories consist of type of combat (grappling vs. striking, stand-up fighting vs. ground fighting). Unarmed martial arts can be broadly grouped into those focusing on strikes, those focusing on grappling, and those that cover both fields, often described as hybrid martial arts.

Martial art that dominantly uses Strikes are 1) Punching: Boxing, Wing Chun, Karate. 2) Kicking: Taekwondo, Capoeira, Savate. 3) Others using strikes: Lethwei, Muay Thai, Kung Fu, Pencak Silat, Kalaripayattu.

Martial art that dominantly uses Grappling are 1) Throwing: Hapkido, Judo, Sumo, Wrestling, Aikido. 2) Joint lock/Chokeholds/Submission holds: Judo, Jujutsu, Brazilian jiu-jitsu, Sambo, Catch wrestling. 3) Pinning Techniques: Judo, Wrestling, Aikido

Some martial arts in various cultures can be performed in dance-like settings for various reasons, such as for evoking ferocity in preparation for battle or showing off skill in a more stylized manner, with capoeira being the most prominent example. Many such martial arts incorporate music, especially strong percussive rhythms.
