

When it is midday in London, it is _____ o'clock in the afternoon in Oman. On the other side of the world in Sydney, it is already _____ o'clock in the _____.

The world spins around all day long. It spins through the light of _____ and into the dark of the _____. We have day time when the part of the world we live in is facing the _____. We have night time when our part of the world turns away from the light of the sun. It takes _____ hours for the world to spin around one time.

