Dear Miss Yuli,

I'm very sad to learn that you are ill and can't come for work. I hope that this letter will cheer you up and make you feel a bit better.

The whole class is terribly missing you, Miss Yuli. They say that we tend to appreciate something when it is not there. That is certainly true.

I'm personally missing you a lot. Remember the time I did not do my homework and you made me do so many frog-jumps that I could hardly walk afterwards. Though I was mad then, I realize that you were only watching out of my good.

I look forward to the time you will come back. We really, really need you. Get well soonest!

Sincerely,

Darvin

Alhambra (Al-Hamra; lit. "the red one") the complete form of which was Calat Alhamra, is a palace and fortress complex located in Granada, Andalusia, Spain. It was originally constructed as a small fortress in 889 and then largely ignored until its ruins were renovated and rebuilt in the mid-13th century by the Moorish Emir Mohammed ben Al-Ahmar of the Emirate of Granada, who built its current palace and walls. It was converted into a royal palace in 1333 by Yusuf I, Sultan of Granada.

Alhambra's Islamic palaces, as we know them today, were built for the last Muslim emirs in Spain and the court of the Nasrid dynasty. After the conquest of Granada by the Reyes Catolicos ('Catholic Monarchs') in 1492, some portions were used by Christian rulers. The Palace of Charles V, built by Charles V, Holy Roman Emperor in 1527, was inserted in the Alhambra within the Nasrid fortifications. After being allowed to fall into disrepair for centuries, the building being occupied by squatters, Alhambra was rediscovered in the 19th century by European scholars and travelers, with restorations commencing. It is now one of Spain's major tourist attractions, exhibiting the country's most significant and well known Islamic architecture, together with 16th century and later Christian building and garden interventions. Alhambra is a UNESCO World Heritage Site and the inspiration for many songs and stories.

On May, 2014 it was my birthday. My mom and Dad decided to on a cruise to the Bahamas. We went on one of the Carnival cruise ships. This boat was the biggest boat I ever saw. When we rushed to get on the cruise ship I saw that there were so many rooms and shops. My favorite room was the game room, when I entered the game room there were so many games and seemed like there were hundreds and hundreds of them. I started to get bored so I left. When I went back to our room my dad was thinking about going scuba diving.

The following morning my dad planned to go scuba diving when all the tourists went to go sightseeing on the island. We went to the scuba shop and rented all the gear. When the boat came I put on all the gear. When we got on the boat we had to sit on the edge, so we could flip over the side.

Finally, the boat stopped and I could barely see the islands. The captain said not to go past the big cones. I was pretty scared because the water was so deep, but I finally jumped off. Scuba diving was scary so all I did was following my Dad. I finally stop being afraid and looked at all the colors that were weird and unusual. The colors were hot orange and dark red. My favorite coral was the one with the hair on it. It was pretty cool because fish would enter, but would not leave because the coral would eat them.

The first I saw was cool and the only fish I knew was the Angel fish. I knew this fish because of all the colors it had. The other fish were big and had the biggest teeth I ever saw, but I didn't know what they were called. The fish I liked most were the ones swimming around my feet. They were stripped orange and white. My Dad and I only stayed under the water for 30 minutes. Scuba diving was pretty hard because you had to move your feet all the time.

When we went back to our rooms I was cold because of our scuba trip. When we were back on the cruise ship I asked my Dad if I could go scuba diving again and he said maybe.

17. The main idea of paragraph two is...
- (A) The writer rented the gears for scuba diving
  - (B) The writer went around the island for sightseeing
  - (C) The writer saw kinds of fish while enjoying scuba diving
  - (D) The writer sat on the edge of the boat to flip over the side

  - (B) To tell the writer's first experience for having cruise ship.
  - (C) To describe the writer's feeling of having scuba diving
  - (D) To tell the preparation and tips for having cruise ship.
19. What did the writer do when she was afraid of having scuba diving?
- (A) She moved her feet in the water all the time
  - (B) She followed her father wherever he went.
  - (C) She asked the captain to stop the boat.
  - (D) She jumped off into the water.
20. How did the writer recognize the Angel fish more than the others? Because of...
- (A) The size
  - (B) The color
  - (C) The teeth
  - (D) The stripes

Zorapterans

Zorapterans (sometimes called Angel insects) are the third smallest order of insects, with around 30 species (only the Mantophasmatodea and Grylloblattodea have fewer species). All known members of this little order belong in one family – the Zorotypidae. There are two genera – Formosozoros and Zorotypus. They are found in tropical and warm climates, especially the US, Africa and SE Asia, though few entomologists have ever seen them.

These tiny, delicate insects are normally less than 3mm in size and live in small groups under bark or in rotting wood of leaf litter. They have also been found in termite nests from time to time. Angel insects have triangular heads and biting mouthparts and look and behave like termites. They are scavengers of fungal spores and mycelium, and they sometimes eat tiny mites. They also like to spend some time grooming themselves, after the carcass, according to those who know about these insects.

In some species of angel insects males also give gifts of secretions from glands in the head when looking for a mate, and the female seems to choose males on the basis of the quality of this offering. Females may mate with the same male more than once. In other species, males are known to fight for females, kicking each other with their hind legs.

The Cycle of Evil

There was once a king who was cruel and unjust that his subjects caused his death.

However, one day he surprised them all by announcing that he had decided to turn over a new leaf. "No more cruelty, no more injustice," he promised, and he was as good as his word. He became known as the 'Gentle Monarch'.

Months after his transformation, one of his ministers plucked up enough courage to ask him what had brought about his change of heart, and the king answered: "As I galloping through my forests I caught sight of a fox being chased by a hound. The fox escaped into his hole but not before the hound had bitten into its leg and lamed it for life. I rode into a village and saw the same hound there. It was barking at a man. Evan as I watcher, the man picked up a huge stone and flung it at the dog, breaking its leg. The man had not gone far when he was kicked by a horsehis knee was shattered and he fell to the ground, disabled for life. The horse began to run nut it fell into a hole and broke its leg. Reflecting on all that had happened, I thought "Evil brings about evil. If I continue in my evil ways, I will surely be overtaken by evil. So I decided to change."

The minister went away convinced that the time was ripe to overthrow the king and seize the throne. Immersed in thought, he did not see the steps in front of him and fell, breaking his neck.

Tools of Persuasion

Persuasion is the art of convincing someone to agree with your point of view. According to the ancient Greek philosopher Aristotle, there are three basic tools of persuasion: ethos, pathos, and logos.

Ethos is a speaker's way of convincing the audience that she is a credible source. An audience will consider a speaker credible if she seems trustworthy, reliable, and sincere. This can be done in many ways. For example, a speaker can develop ethos by explaining how much experience or education she has in the field. After all, you would be more likely to listen to advice about how to take care of your teeth from a dentist than a firefighter. A speaker can also create ethos by convincing the audience that she is a good person who has their best interests at heart. If an audience cannot trust you, you will not be able to persuade them.

Pathos is a speaker's way of connecting with an audience's emotions. For example, a speaker who is trying to convince an audience to vote for him might say that he alone can save the country from a terrible war. These words are intended to fill the audience with fear, thus making them want to vote for him. Similarly, a charity organization that helps animals might show an audience pictures of injured dogs and cats. These images are intended to fill the viewers with pity. If the audience feels bad for the animals, they will be more likely to donate money.

Logos is the use of facts, information, statistics, or other evidence to make your argument more convincing. An audience will be more likely to believe you if you have data to back up your claims. For example, a commercial for soap might tell you that laboratory tests have shown that their soap kills all 7,000,000 of the bacteria living on your hands right now. This piece of information might make you more likely to buy their brand of soap. Presenting this evidence is much more convincing than simply saying "our soap is the best!" Use of logos can also increase a speaker's ethos; the more facts a speaker includes in his argument, the more likely you are to think that he is educated and trustworthy.

Although ethos, pathos, and logos all have their strengths, they are often most effective when they are used together. Indeed, most speakers use a combination of ethos, pathos, and logos to persuade their audiences. The next time you listen to a speech, watch a commercial, or listen to a friend try to convince you to lend him some money, be on the lookout for these ancient Greek tools of persuasion.

44. Amy is trying to convince her mother to buy her a pair of $200 shoes. She says: "Mom, the shoes I have are really old and ugly. If I don't get these new shoes, everyone at school is going to laugh at me. I will be so embarrassed that I will want to die."
What form of persuasion is Amy using here?
45. According to the passage, logos can build ethos because?
