There was once a boy called Mario who loved to have loads of friends. He showed off a lot, always talked about how many friends he had at school, and how friendly he was with everyone.

One day his grandfather said to him.

'Mario, I bet you a big bag of popcorn, you don't have as many friends as you think. I'm sure many of them are just companions or acquaintances.'

Mario accepted the bet without a hesitation. But he didn't know how he would test his schoolmates to find out if they were real friends or not. So, he asked his grandpa. The old man said,

'I have just exactly what you need, it is in the attic. Wait here a minute'.

Grandpa left and returned carrying something in his hand, but Mario could see nothing there.

'Take it, it's a very special chair. It is invisible and it's quite tricky to sit on it. But if you take it to school and manage to sit on it, you'll activate its magic and you'll be able to tell who your real friends are'.

Mario felt brave, he took the strange invisible chair and set off to school. During the break he asked everyone to make a circle and sat in the middle with his chair.

'Nobody move. You will see something amazing!'

And Mario tried to sit on the chair. But he couldn't see it and fell down onto his backside. Everyone laughed!

'Wait, please. Just a slight technical problem!'

He tried to sit again but he missed the seat. He kept trying but he kept falling on the ground...until he tried again and didn't fall. This time he sat hovering in mid-air....

Then it was that he finally realized the magic that his grandpa was talking about! Mario saw George, Lucas and Diana – three of his best friends – holding him up so he couldn't fall.

And there the show came to an end. He left with his three friends and he told them about his grandpa and how he explained to him that true friends are those who care for us.

That evening the four friends went to see Mario's grandpa to pay out the bet.

They had a great time listening to stories and eating pop-corn.
