Jan's Adventure in Glasgow

Jan and his mom were visiting Glasgow. They live in Prague. She worked as an (1) at the Lighthouse. While she was at work, Jan went to the Kelvingrove Museum of Art. There he saw a photograph (2) about Glasgow. He loved it! It was so nice outside that he decided to walk to the Lighthouse instead of taking a (3). He walked down University Avenue and crossed the river on Gibson Street. A (4) was playing guitar on Woodland Road so he stopped to listen. Then he walked across Kelvingrove Park. On the way he bought a bag of chips from a (5) and sat on a bench. Some teenagers were playing (6) on the grass. On the path there were two (7) and a man walking his dog. Some people were doing yoga. It was very pleasant. Then Jan noticed a man walking to him. The man was big and looked very angry. He had a moustache and was holding something in his hands. He looked at it and then back up at Jan. Then he started jogging towards him. Jan was so scared that he ran around the building and down Berkeley Street. He could almost see the Lighthouse and he wanted to get there quickly. He only needed to cross North Street. But North Street was blocked because of road repairs. He couldn't get through! The man was getting closer and even calling his name! "How does he know my name?" Jan asked himself. He ran across the grass until he came to Lancefield Quay, where he hit his leg on a fire hydrant. He still couldn't get across North Street so he crossed Squinty (8) quickly and he saw the Grand Olde Opry. It was loud and everyone there was dressed in big (9), cowboy boots, and jeans with big belt buckles. They were dancing and singing country songs. A large cowboy came to Jan and said: "Howdy, partner. Everything OK?" "There's a big man outside who's following me." "Oh, is that right? You stay here. I'll be right back." The cowboy walked outside and spoke to the big man with the moustache. Then they both came inside. They were both laughing! Jan was surprised. He thought the cowboy wanted to help him. He felt very scared. As the big man came closer, Jan closed his eyes. "Hello Jan," the man said. "How do you know my name?" "I'm the security guard at the Kelvingrove Museum of Art. You left your (10) on the counter while you were paying for your ticket. I tried to give it back to you." He gave Jan the wallet and his jacket. Jan was so happy, but felt very stupid. "I'm sorry I ran away from you," Jan said. "Quite alright, lad. I needed some exercise. And you had a nice city tour." The man smiled. Jan laughed and asked the man how to get to the Lighthouse.
