It was love at first sight —or better, love at first throw. Reina Iizuka was fascinated by football her entire life. She wanted to play when she went to her university in Manitoba, Canada, where she studied philosophy; however, there were no football teams for girls. So she decided to try out for the male team! When she tried out, the Coach thought she was a boy at first. When he found out she was a girl, he let her play on the team either way. Although Reina is small compared to her teammates, she is very determined and never gives up. There have been times that she's wanted to quit, but her love for football won.

Now 20, Iizuka has made history as the first female football player in Canada.
