

READ THE FOLLOWING TEXT : United Kingdom, three different nationalities but British

The map illustrates the United Kingdom and Ireland. The British Isles are shown, with the British Isles divided into four colored regions: England (pink), Wales (light green), Scotland (light blue), and Northern Ireland (yellow). The flags of each country are overlaid on their respective regions: the Saltire of Saint Patrick for Northern Ireland, the Saltire of Saint George for England, the Saltire of Saint David for Wales, and the Saltire of Saint Patrick for Scotland. Ireland is shown as a separate, uncolored island to the west. A legend on the left identifies the colors: pink for England, light green for Wales, light blue for Scotland, and yellow for Northern Ireland. Text on the right discusses the concept of nationality in the UK, noting that people from Scotland or Wales are not English, and that the English are from England.

Britain: Three nationalities in one country

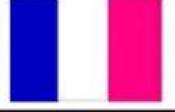

People from Canada are Canadian.
People from Japan are Japanese.
The Irish are from Ireland. And people from Britain are ... British, right?

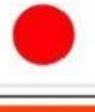

Yes, they are! But it isn't that simple.
They're also Scottish, Welsh or English. It depends on the country where they're from. So be careful! Remember: people from Scotland or Wales are not English, OK?
The English are from England!

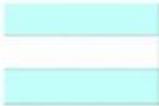

England
Wales
Scotland
Northern Ireland

Britain = Great Britain
The United Kingdom = Britain and Northern Ireland
