A month ago it didn't cross my mind that on Saturday afternoon in March I'd be 70 metres above the ground and having the time of my life. Now I looked down at the stream far below, and realised why people enjoy rock climbing.

My friend Halim and I had arrived at the Climbing Centre on Friday evening. We headed there right after school. The accommodation wasn't great, but we had everything we need; bunks, blankets and some food plus we were pleased to be out in the countryside and breathing fresh air.

On Saturday morning we met the other six members of our groups. Jamal had come along with two friends, Zul and Faris, while cousins Aishah and Nurul had come with Atikah. We had come from many different places, so none of us knew the area.

We knew we were going to spend some time outdoors, but none of us was sure exactly how. Half of us spent the morning caving while the others went rock-climbing and then we changed at lunchtime. Halim and I went to the caves first. Climbing out was harder than going in, but after a good deal of pushing, we went out at last - covered in mud, but pleased and excited by what I'd done.
