Harry and the music competition

Harry loved singing. He was already quite good at playing the guitar and wanted to have piano and violin lessons, too. Last week, Harry's music teacher, Mr. Kite, told the students about a competition. Anyone could enter. Students could sing or just play their favorite tune.

'It will be on Saturday, March 18th in the Queen's Theatre. The first prize will be ten lessons on the instrument you like the most!' Mr. Kite said.

It was only March 4th, so Harry had two weeks to practice. Every evening, he tried to choose a special song to sing. It was difficult but two days before the competition, he heard a song on his grandmother's radio that he really loved. He found it online. He listened to it again and again and practiced it a lot. When he went up on the stage to sing his song, Harry was worried. 'Will I forget the words?' he thought. But he didn't and he sang very well.

And who won the competition? Harry did of course! 'Which song did you sing, Harry?' his grandmother asked that evening. 'It was called "I'm So Lucky"!' he said. 'And which instrument are you going to learn?' 'I've thought about this very carefully,' Harry said. 'The drums!' 'The noisiest instrument, then. Oh dear!' his grandmother said and laughed.

Examples:

Harry could play the guitar quite well.

Harry also wanted piano and violin lessons.
