

I find myself in a quiet and relaxed place. Birds sing around me and the cool morning breeze caresses my face.

The leaves falling from the trees pile up on the ground, forming a beautiful landscape of ochre, reds and dark greens.

From my house I can see the whole mountain range, the trees, the river and from time to time some wild animal appears in the fields to run away as soon as it sees me.

Summer is gone and in a few months the cold winter will begin, with its white and thick snowfalls.

It will be a strange feeling when the noise of the animals is silenced by the cold of the cold wind.
