

Chapter 3 – To Galata

Hezarfen doesn't fly.

He falls. Mehmet hears a big crash and a cry from the foot of the hill.

He goes quickly down the hill to his friend. Hezarfen is lying under his wings. Ali is next to him.

'His leg's broken,' Ali says.

'No, it isn't,' Hezarfen answers. 'My wings are broken. But I'm OK!'

'This time,' Mehmet cries. 'But what about next time? Be careful, my friend. You don't want to die.'

They take the broken wings back to Hezarfen's workshop.

'Now what?' Ali asks.

'I understand more. The design of my wings needs to be different – bigger and better. But that can wait,' Hezarfen says. 'Right now I must go and see the District Chief of Galata.'

'Galata!' Mehmet cries. 'Why?'

'I want to fly from the Galata Tower. So I need his permission for that.'

'Forget it! The district chief never asks people into his office!' Ali says.

'Let's see,' Hezarfen cries. 'Come on!' And he and his friends take a boat across the Bosphorus.

The three friends walk from the Bosphorus up to the Galata Tower. Two tall guards stop them when they arrive. 'What do you want?' one of them asks.

'We want to see the District Chief of Galata,' Hezarfen answers. Ali and Mehmet are afraid.

'What's your name?' the guard asks.

'Hezarfen Ahmet Çelebi.'

'Ah, the brother of the rocket maker, Lagari Hasan Çelebi. All Istanbul is talking of him!' the guard says.

'Yes,' Hezarfen answers tiredly.

'So can I see the district chief?' he asks the man.

'Wait!' the guard says. And he goes in to the district chief's office.
