16 The House of Representatives is called "the House" for the short. And 17 sometimes it is called "the People's House." That term which was chosen 18 as a nickname because of the men who wrote the U.S. Constitution in 19 1787 had set few restrictions on who could serve there. They wanted the 20 House to be so as close as possible to everyday Americans. One of the 21 writers of the Constitution, James Madison, wrote it about the House 22 years later. He was noted, "The door of this part of the federal 23 government is being open to merit of every description, whether native or 24 adoptive, whether he young or old, and without regard to poverty or 25 wealth, or to any of particular profession of religious faith."
