I _____ to ash and dust

I _____ my brow and I _____ my rust

I _____ in the _____

I'm breaking in, shaping up, then checking out on the prison bus

This is it, the apocalypse

Whoa

I'm waking up, I feel it in my _____

Enough to make my systems blow

Welcome to the new age, to the new age (x2)

Whoa, oh, oh, oh, oh, whoa, oh, oh, oh, I'm radioactive, radioactive (x2)

I _____ my _____ don my _____

It's a _____, I suppose

We'll _____ it _____ to _____ right in

(Chorus)

All _____ go, the _____ hasn't _____

Deep in my _____, straight from inside

I'm waking up, I feel it in my bones

Enough to _____ my _____ blow

Welcome to the new age, to the new age

Welcome to the new age, to the new age

Whoa, oh, oh, oh, oh, whoa, oh, oh, oh, I'm radioactive, radioactive

Meaning of the song

Radioactive is wrought with dark undertones and is filled with apocalyptic and revolutionary images – and can be interpreted as a subtle provocation aimed at the rampant consumerism and blatant disregard for the negative externalities that production of goods and services on a global scale has on the environment and the respective ecosystems around the world.

The lyrics paint a picture of a post-apocalyptic world which is filled with ash and dust and humans breathe in toxic chemicals - alluding to what a world might look like if we continue on with our current methods and means of production and consumption.

Imagine Dragons has woven into its lyric a deeply profound prospect, that while we, as a collective world, have been pursuing growth for the sake of economic prosperity, in so doing we have also sown the seeds of our own destruction. These seeds are now emerging as negative externalities such as waste water run- off, deforestation, air pollution, land degradation due to dumping and waste, and if we don't change now then we may very well be "waking up to ash and dust".
