Reading

The world of Roald Dahl

1 Is there a child who doesn't know the stories of Roald Dahl? His work delights millions of us in our childhood. He wrote his first children's stories, James and the Giant Peach and Charlie and the Chocolate Factory in the 1960s, but the characters are just as popular today as they were in the past. As well as reading the books, children today often discover Dahl's characters through plays and films.

c Millions of people love Dahl's work years after he wrote the stories. Why? Perhaps it's because the characters make us laugh and they can make us scared. Dahl knew what children liked, but how? He began to write books for children after his own children were born. He couldn't do it before then, he said.

d Dahl sometimes used people and events from his childhood in his stories. He went to boarding school, which he hated. Some of the teachers were unkind. The cruel teacher in Matilda – Mrs Trunchball – was like some of Dahl's teachers. But Dahl had good memories, too. Sometimes, Cadbury – a British chocolate maker – sent a small box to every boy at Dahl's school. Inside the box were new chocolate bars! The boys are them and sent comments to Cadbury. A dream job! Can you guess which story this memory found its way into?!
