

How do people around the world greet each other?

Every culture has a unique way of greeting people and in the next article you will find the most unique ways to say hello around the world.

1. Tibet:

Tibetan monks stick their tongue out to greet people. They started doing this to prove that they're not the reincarnation of a cruel king from the 9th century that had a black tongue.

2. Philippines:

In the Philippines, elders are greeted by taking one of their hands gently and pressing it on your forehead. They call this gesture "Mano" (which is "hand" in Spanish) and it's used to show respect.

3. Japan:

People greet each other with a bow in Japan. Depending on the person their greeting, and their social status, bows differ in angle and duration.

4. Kenya

The tribe warriors perform an elaborated jumping dance.

5. Tuvalu

The traditional greeting in Tuvalu is to press their cheeks together and simultaneously inhaling.

6. Oman

In Oman, men often greet each other by pressing their noses together.

Answer to the following questions:

1. How does Kenya tribe receive new people?
 - a. By standing up for long periods
 - b. By jumping and dancing

2. What is the traditional greeting in Tuvalu?
 - a. With a bow
 - b. With the tongue
 - c. By pressing their cheeks together and simultaneously inhaling.

3. Why do Tibetan monks stick their tongue out to greet people?
 - a. To prove that they're not the reincarnation of a cruel king
 - b. To show respect.

4. Who often greet each other by pressing their noses together?
 - a. Oman women
 - b. Oman men

5. How are elders in the Philippines greeted?
 - a. By taking both of their hands gently and pressing them on your forehead
 - b. By taking one of their hands gently and pressing it on your forehead