

READING

Two popular restaurants in Paris like beautiful people. They give them better tables than ordinary people. Staff who used to work there said good-looking customers get the good places. Other people can see them. Ordinary diners sat in the corner. Celebrity guests always got good tables. The waiters and waitresses also had to look good. Anyone who was short, without a model's body and over 30 could not work there.

The owners have a 'beauty policy'. They want the restaurants to have a good image. If one owner saw a "non-attractive" person at a good table, he told the staff: "There are good-looking people, you put them here; there are bad-looking people, you put them there." Customers who made telephone bookings could not ask for a favourite table. Staff decided which table to give them after they came to the restaurant. They needed to check their faces.

READING TASK ONE

Read the questions. Now answer the questions:

What is the reading about?

- Restaurants that people like to visit in Paris, France.
- Restaurants that put customers who are 'not beautiful' on tables for 'ordinary people' and customers who are beautiful on tables for 'good looking' people.
- A restaurant who only allows beautiful people to work at the restaurant

READING TASK TWO

Now answer the True/False/NG questions.

- The story is about three restaurants in Paris.
- People who are 'ordinary' looking must be slim so they can eat at the restaurant.
- Customers can't make telephone bookings to eat at the restaurant.
- The waiters and waitresses need to be good looking to work at the restaurant.
- Beautiful people sit in the corner of a restaurant.
- Staff at the restaurant check people's faces so they can decide what tables they can sit at.