Three Chinese women were left stranded at a South Korean airport after immigration _____ said their passport photos did not match their faces. The women had just had cosmetic _____ to change their looks. The surgery had _____ their faces to such an _____ that passport control _____ in South Korea could not confirm their identity. Photos of the women went viral on the Internet. Their faces were swollen from the surgery and were heavily bandaged. The Shanghaiist.com website reported that the women were not allowed to take their return flight back to China, and were instead held for _____ by the airport _____. It is still unclear if the women have been able to return to China.

South Korea has become the cosmetic surgery capital of the world. Cosmetic surgery tourism from China is now _____ business. More than 500,000 Chinese _____ a year flock to _____ in South Korea to reshape their faces and bodies. Many of them go to clinics that _____ in making clients look more "Western". Cosmetic surgery is also hugely popular with South Koreans. Around half of women under 30 in the capital Seoul are _____ to have had surgery. Many parents encourage their children to _____ surgery in efforts to _____ a "competitive edge" in the job market. There are even hugely popular _____ time TV shows that feature before and after _____.
