Dear Jeanne

My daughter and I _____ (argue) a lot recently and it's making me really sad. We argue about a lot of things but it's mainly because she never helps around the house. I come home late from work and the house is a mess. I _____ (try) speaking to her lots of times, but she won't listen to us. She _____ (not speak) to me since our last argument and that was three days ago! When I was young, I always _____ (help) my parents at home but she just doesn't care. What can I do?

Clara

Dear Clara

I'm sorry to hear about your problems. In my opinion, many parents _____ (give) their children too much freedom and now they're living with the consequences. Why does your daughter think she doesn't need to help? Probably because you _____ (not teach) her to respect you when she was little. Now she's nearly an adult and it may be too late. I can only advise you to keep talking and explaining. Tell her: 'When I _____ (work) all day, you need to help me clean up in the evening'. Give her reasons, not rules – it might help.
