A Beach Clean-up

It was the school holidays. The Nature Society of my school (0) has planned a trip to the beach. We (1) was going to clean up the beach as it was dirty and polluted. We left school in a chartered bus at 7.30 a.m. Everyone was excited about the clean-up and was in high spirits. Within half an hour, we reached the beach. It was a sight for sore eyes (2) but every part of the beach was littered with rubbish. The sun was already high in the sky and everybody was beginning to (3) felt the heat. Beads of perspiration trickled down our backs and necks. Mr Ong, the teacher-in-charge, gave a short briefing and split (4) them into groups. We were given rubbish bags and we started filling them up. By 12 noon, we had already collected ten bags (5) filling with plastic bottles, aluminium cans, newspapers, cigarette butts, plastic bags...the list seemed endless. (6) However, rubbish bins had been placed around the area, people still littered wherever (7) it liked. We finally completed the clean-up (8) on three o'clock in the afternoon. Mr Ong thanked everyone for a job well done. We were very pleased with our efforts. In a way, by cleaning up the beach, we had done our part to save the environment.
