Adjusting to a New Place

It has been a month since we moved to Kuantan. I am (0) adjusted well to my new home and school. When I first arrived here, I (1) am quite sad, lonely and upset. I did not like Kuantan at all. I wished (2) her father had not got a transfer here. I missed my old home and also all my (3) friend back in Kuala Lumpur. My mother, however, talked to me (4) but said that I should take this as an opportunity to explore new things. She also encouraged me to make new friends. I realised she was right. Yesterday evening, I went for a stroll on the beach. I was (5) read my favourite novel, Miss Peregrine's Home for Peculiar Children, when a girl named Farah came up to me. She was tall and thin, with her long hair tied up in a ponytail. She greeted me with a warm smile. She sat down beside me and we ended up chatting for one hour. I soon found out that we were attending (6) a same school. The next day, Farah met me at the school gate. Even though we were not in the same class, she (7) introducing me to her friends. They were very friendly, funny and cheerful. I enjoyed (8) our company very much. I was glad that they accepted me as their friend. I was beginning to like my new place. Kuantan is starting to feel like home now.
