

Reading- Mole Festival in Mexico

Read the text about a festival and choose True or False.

Last month, my boyfriend and I went to a wonderful festival. It was a mole festival in a small town near Mexico City. What's mole? It's a special sauce made from hot peppers, tortillas and bread, spices, and chocolate! It's delicious and you eat it over chicken or turkey pieces or you can make enchiladas with it. Enchiladas are tortillas filled with chicken and covered with sauce.

It was a great festival. There were hundreds of small stands, each one with its own particular variety of mole. Some were very spicy, others were sweet. Each one was different. As you passed each stand, people gave you spoons containing a small amount of their interpretation of mole. If you really liked one, you could sit down and eat a delicious plate of mole and chicken or even buy condensed mole to take home. It was unforgettable.

1. Mole is a delicious spice made from hot peppers, tortillas and bread.
2. There was not a great variety of mole in the festival
3. The author of the text enjoyed the festival
4. The festival was in a big city

5. Answer the following question:

What foods are mentioned in the text that are good with mole?