Take, for example, the contrast (2. between / among) Western and Asian cultures regarding correct ways of giving and (3. receiving / accepting) gifts. In some Asian cultures, it is customary to refuse a gift several times before accepting it. Westerners may find (4. it / them) frustrating when they offer a gift to someone and the receiver turns it down.

Read the following passage and choose the best answer for each of the following questions.

In the late 20th century, mass media could be classified into eight mass media industries: books, the Internet, magazines, movies, newspapers, radio, recordings, and television. The explosion of digital communication technology in the late 20th and early 21st centuries gave rise to the question: what forms of media should be classified as "mass media"? For example, it is controversial whether to include cell phones and video games in the definition.

Each mass medium has its own content types, creative artists, technicians, and business models. For example, the Internet includes blogs, podcasts, web sites, and various other technologies built atop the general distribution network. Internet and mobile phones are often referred to collectively as digital media, and radio and TV as broadcast media. Some argue that video games have developed into a distinct mass form of media, in the sense that they provide a common experience to millions of people across the globe and convey the same messages and ideologies to all their users.
