a) Offering Help/Service

Offering help/service is a polite way to react about situations. It's a good habit if we like helping people. In some situations, people have a job to serve customers, such as receptionist, customer service, librarian, shop assistant, and waiter. Now read the dialogue!

Librarian	: May I help you?
Alice	: Yes, please. I can't find the book entitled "Syntax"
Robby	: The catalogue shows that the book is in the shelf C 48, but we can't find it.
Librarian	: Let me see. Is it the book you are looking for?
Alice	: Yes, it is. Thank you very much.
Librarian	: You are welcome

b) Social Function of Offering Help

The social function of offering help/service to others is to maintain interpersonal relationship with others by offering help/service.

c) Language Features of Offering Help/Service

To offer help/service, we usually use the following expressions and the responses

Offering Help/Service	Accepting Help/Service	Refusing Help or Service
▪ May I help you?	▪ Yes, please	▪ Please, don't bother
▪ Can I help you?	▪ Thank you very much	▪ Thanks. I can manage myself.
▪ Would you like me to (do something)?	▪ Thanks for your help	▪ Thank you, but there is no need to.
▪ Do you want me to (do something)?	▪ That's very kind of you	▪ No, that's quite all right
▪ Do you want me to (do something)?	▪ You helped me a lot	▪ No, thanks
▪ What shall I do for you?	▪ If you don't mind it.	▪ No, don't bother
▪ Let me help you?
▪ Do you need any help?

d) Structure of Offering Help/Service

Read the following dialogue

- Ima : May I help you? (Offering help)
- Ria : Yes, I need a dictionary (Response)
- Ima : Oh, there are many dictionaries that we have.
