

"All the better to eat you with;" and hardly _____ (are) the words spoken when the Wolf _____ (make) a jump out of bed, and swallowed up poor Little Red-Cap also.

As soon as the Wolf _____ (have) thus satisfied his hunger, he laid himself down again on the bed, and _____ (go) to sleep and snored very loudly. A huntsman passing by overheard him, and said, "How loudly that old woman snores! I must see if anything is the matter."

So he went into the cottage; and when he came to the bed, he _____ (see) the Wolf sleeping in it. "What! are you here, you old rascal? I have been looking for you," he shouted and taking up his gun, he shot the old Wolf. When he cut open the wolf's tummy, Red-Cap and her grandmother were both still alive, just covered in the slime that you find inside the tummy of a wolf. That _____ (mean) they both had to have extra-long baths that evening.

