

A stylized illustration of the water cycle. It begins on the left with mountains and a lake, where water is collected into a reservoir. The water then flows through a series of pipes and tanks, representing distribution and storage. It passes through a city with buildings and a factory, indicating water usage. Finally, the water is shown returning to the ocean on the right, completing the cycle. The entire process is depicted with blue pipes and tanks against a white background.

