

Red nose

Who wears red noses? Well, the _____ answer is clowns. Red noses are part of their traditional make-up. But on one _____ day in March every two years, millions of British people wear them, too. And what's this _____ day called? Red Nose Day, of course!

On Red Nose Day, you can help people and have great fun, too. People _____ buy millions of plastic red noses – and all the money goes to _____. Children and teenagers wear them to school and university. Even _____ wear them to work! Most schools have _____ Red Nose Day _____. Last year some students in Oxford wore pyjamas all day at school. And in a school in Cambridge, students dressed as superheroes.

In a special TV programme, _____ and comedians do _____ things and _____ phone in and pay money. In 2011 people gave more than £74 million _____. The Prime Minister, Take That and Susan Boyle were on the show. One year, a group of _____, _____ pop stars, climbed Mount Kilimanjaro in Tanzania to _____.

An organisation called Comic _____ started Red Nose Day in 1985. A group of comedians decided to use comedy and _____ to _____ people about _____ in the UK and Africa. Its first TV programme was on Christmas Day on the BBC.

The _____ raised for _____ since Comic _____ began is over £650 million! 60 per cent goes to _____ in Africa and 40 per cent to _____ in the UK. The money helps poor families, the old and the sick. It also helps young people to get a better education.